Baboon Mothers and Infants Jeanne Altmann

For years Jeanne Altmann has set methodological standards for primate field-workers. In Baboon Mothers and Infants she applies her uniquely sophisticated techniques to the mother-infant relationship, its demography and ecology within the natural setting. Based on the Amboseli National Park study, the most successful long-term study of the social structure and behavior of a nonhuman primate in the wild, Altmann's book presents a new, incredibly detailed, and remarkably holistic body of data describing the reproductive strategies of a primate female.
